

Families Matter

10 Ways to Build Self-esteem and Self Confidence

Always tell the truth. Ask your kids if they feel good about themselves when they don't tell the truth. It's hard to feel good about yourself when you are worried that someone is going to find out that you didn't tell the truth. It causes stress. On the other hand, if they tell the truth, they can feel good about themselves for being honest. The fact that they know that you are proud of them for being honest makes them feel good about themselves as well.

Take Responsibility. Tell your kids that if they did something they shouldn't have, admit it! Don't blame it on others or make excuses. Let them know that when they can take responsibility for their actions, they can take pride in themselves for behaving like a responsible person.

Be able to take a compliment. If someone gives you a compliment, smile and say "Thank you." The fact that someone compliments you should make you feel good about yourself. To say thank you to the person giving the compliment makes them feel good about themselves. This is a win-win situation.

Complete assignments early. If your kids have a homework assignment, it's best to finish it early. Once it's done, they can feel good about themselves for fulfilling their responsibilities. If they put it off, it becomes stressful when it competes with other family activities of the evening such as dinner, bath, etc. Worse yet, it gets put off until the next morning and the stress level rises even further.

Avoid negative people. Tell your children to pick friends who have high self-esteem, and who feel good about themselves. There is a lot of truth in the pressure of peer influence, and to the old saying "birds of a feather flock together." Keep a keen eye on the types of friends your children play with.

Help raise the self-esteem of others. One of the best ways to raise your own self-esteem is to raise the self-esteem of others. Let others know that you like the way their new haircut looks, or the way they always have a smile on their face. Congratulate them on their accomplishment. When we compliment someone and they smile, it causes us to smile as well.

Dream big dreams about the future. Let your children know that it is okay to dream BIG about their future. They can be an astronaut and be the first person to walk on Mars. They can be the President of the United States, or leader of their country and bring peace to the entire world. When we dream about ourselves and our future, we feel good about ourselves.

Parents are more important than friends. Kids need to remember that their parents are more important than their friends. The underlying factor in there is that parents love their kids unconditionally.

Be Healthy. Exercise regularly. Eat only those foods that are good for you. This is easier said than done when it comes to kids, however there are many creative ways to get your kids to eat healthy. The planet is made up mostly of water. The human body is made up mostly of water. How much of your child's diet is made up of water?

Pick activities that are important. Have your kids pick activities that are important to them. Prioritize them and then master them one at a time. Each time a child masters something they have incredible pride in themselves.

Oklahoma State University

Volume 5, Issue 11

September 2009

Contact the Extension Office at 273-7683 or
Sonya.mcdaniel@okstate.edu

